

Ziegler Building as is today, August 2012.

William Ziegler built this ornate structure with upstairs living quarters around 1900. There was a hardware store on the ground floor that also sold windmills. It became Vogt's Hardware Store in 1907. A basement was dug in the back, and an elevator was installed to move goods to the second floor or to the basement. This 1920 image shows a windmill at the rear of the building.

